PROCEEDINGS OF THE
FIRST ANNUAL MEETING
OF THE
TEXAS VETERAN ASSOCIATION,

Held in Houston, May 20 and 21, 1874.

The Veteran Association was called to order by the President, Col. Frank W. Johnson, at "Veteran Hall," on the State Fair Grounds, at 10 o'clock a. m., on the 20th May, 1874; 1st Vice President, Capt. William J. Russell, 2d Vice President, Gen. Walter P. Lane, and the Recording Secretary, Moses Austin Bryan, present.

A procession of Veterans was formed under direction of Gen. J. B. Robertson, and marched to the pavillion, where the President made a short address, and the Rev. Z. N. Morrell offered up a prayer.

The President then introduced Col. Charles DeMorse, the orator of the occasion, who delivered an able address.

Governor Richard Coke being present, was called upon, and delivered a brief but stirring speech to the Veterans.

On motion, the Association proceeded to the hall of "Headquarters," on the Fair Grounds, and were called to order.

On motion of Col. Andrew Neill the thanks of the Association were tendered Col. DeMorse for his able address, and a copy of the same requested for publication.

On motion, the signers of the Declaration of Independence on second March, 1826, were requested, with the officers of that convention present, to take the stand, so that the members of the Association might look upon their faces. Whereupon, Charles B. Stewart, Edwin Waller, Judge William Menifce, S. W. Blount, and W. B. Scates appeared on the stand.

It was then moved that if any of the members of the Consultation or Provisional Government be present, that they also be requested to take the stand. John D. Newel, John J. Linn, W. B. Dewees, members, and E. M. Pease and M. Austin Bryan, officers, approached the stand.

Alexander Horton and Colonel John Forbes, the only survivors of Gen. Sam Houston's staff at San Jacinto, were invited to the stand.

After repeated cheers—when order was restored—on motion the Association adjourned until 4 o'clock p. m.

The Association met at 4 p. m.

The Committee on Credentials appointed at the previous preliminary meeting, made the following report:

To the President of the Veteran Association:

The Committee on Credentials respectfully report that it is impossible for them, for want of time, facilities, evidence and room, to settle the claims of membership for the present meeting, and recommend that with the Constitution as a guide, every applicant be admitted for the present on his honor.

GEORGE B. ERATH,
Chairman.

Which report was received and adopted.

The Committee on Constitution and By-Laws, beg to report as follows, viz:

That the second section of the Constitution be amended by striking out in the fourth line thereof, the words, "23d day of April," and inserting in lieu thereof, the words, "15th day of October." That the third section be amended by striking out the words, "23d day of April" in the last line thereof, and inserting in lieu thereof, the words, "15th day of October." That the fourth section be amended by striking out the words, "23d of April" in the fourth line thereof, and inserting in lieu thereof, the "15th day of October." That the sixth section thereof, be amended to read as follows:

"To acquire full membership in either of the classes of this Association, the person must be fully identified as a citizen of the State of Texas at this time. But all persons who are non-residents of the State, but who rendered service and produce the required proof, may become honorary members of the Association.

WM. McMASTER, Chairman.

The foregoing report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the Constitution be and is hereby amended in accordance with said report.

Hon. Guy M. Bryan introduced the following resolutions, which being explained by him, were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the President, with the assistance of the Secretary (and the right to call to his aid one member from each Senatorial District,) shall appoint and report before the final adjournment, one person from each of said Districts, who shall be chairman of the District, and whose duty it shall be to organize the veterans of the District and report the "name, where born, age, date of immigration," post office and services to Texas of each and every veteran in the District, and appoint a chairman for each county to assist him; all of which the chairman shall report to the Recording Secretary and the Executive Committee, at least two months before the next annual meeting of the Association.

Resolved, 2d. That the survivors of the "Old Three Hundred," and those who were entitled to bounty, land warrants, and donation of land from the Government, for service in the battles of the Revolution, or in any of the campaigns of 1832, 1835, and 1836, shall be styled "The Veteran Guard of Texas," and shall take rank according to their merits.

Resolved, 3d. That the character of proof required for the classes other than the Veteran Guard, shall be the written statement of the interested person, sustained by two reputable persons on their word of honor, that the facts set forth are true.

Resolved, 4th. That the President, Vice-Presidents, and Secretary, E. M. Pease, George Hancock, General J. B. Robertson, James H. Bell, John M. Swisher and W. B. P. Gaines, shall be an executive committee, to transact at their discretion the business of the Association during its recess, and who shall assemble at the place of annual meeting two days before the meeting, and with the chairmen present of the respective districts, prepare business for the regular annual meeting, and provide for the accommodation of the Association when assembled.

On motion of Dr. J. M. Matthews, the following resolution was adopted unanimously:

Resolved, That we tender to the City Council and citizens of Houston generally our heartfelt thanks for the cordial greeting, and hospitality without " stint or limit," universally accorded us and that no tribute more grateful to us could have been tendered than this evidence of their appreciation of our humble and earnest efforts in behalf of the soil we so loved in days gone by.

The thanks of the Association were also tendered to the Fair Association, and to the various railroad companies of the State for their generous liberality in granting members of the Association free passes to and from Houston on said roads.

On motion, the Association decided to hold its next annual meeting at the city of Houston, on the call of the President.

On motion, thanks were tendered the officers of the Association, Gen. J. B. Robertson and Col. E. W. Taylor.

The Secretary read his annual report, which was received and adopted unanimously.

On motion of Gov. E. M. Pease, the present officers of the Association were unanimously re-elected for the ensuing year.

Col. J. W. Bunton asked permission to make a few remarks, which was granted. He then passed a glowing eulogy on the "Hero of San Antonio," Col. Frank W. Johnson, the President of the Veterans Association.

Col. Bunton then offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That it is our earnest and heartfelt desire that Texas remain united and indivisible to our latest generation.

Col. H. B. Andrews was called on, who passed a eulogy on the characters of the fathers of Texas, with whom he had lived for forty years; and explained that the two railroads with which he is connected intended to give to the old pioneers and veteran soldiers a "Free Annual Ticket."

On motion, a subscription was raised to defray the expenses of the Association, and two hundred and seventy-seven dollars were paid in to the Recording Secretary.

The Association then adjourned until 9 o'clock to-morrow morning, May 21.

SECOND DAY.

The Association met in the City Hall, generously granted by the City Council, Vice President William J. Russell in the chair (owing to the President being unwell), and the other officers present.

After various motions being made and discussed, it was resolved that each person present report to the Secretary the names of such Veterans as he knows to have died recently.

A list of these is published at the end of the names of the Veterans of the first class.

The Committee on Memorials presented the following report which was adopted:

To the Hon. President of the Veterans Association:

Your Committee on Memorials, respectfully report that no business has been laid before them requiring any action on their part. They are aware that a desire has been expressed by some members of the Association to have the Legislature memorialized to repeal the provision of the "pension law" which limits the payment of pensions after 1st of July, 1874, to those only who are needy; but your committee do not think it expedient to take any action on that subject at this time. It is well known that this limitation was only inserted because of the present financial embarrassment of the State Treasury, and they have entire faith that the representatives of the people of this State will remove that limitation as soon as that embarrassment shall cease. Your committee beg leave to submit the accompanying resolution, and recommend its adoption:

Resolved, That this Association desires to express its gratitude to the Fourteenth Legislature of Texas for its recognition of the services of those who established its independence, and for the provision that has been made for a portion of the Texas Veterans; and they desire, also, to express their confidence that the representatives of the people of this State will, as soon as the condition of the treasury will permit, extend the benefits of the "pension law" to all who are excepted from the provisions of the present law.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

EDWIN WALLER, Ch's,
A. H. JONES,
D. M. STAPP,
A. TURNER,
WALTER P. LANE.

Report received and adopted.

The following resolution was then adopted:

Resolved, That all those who have the evidence of their services with them shall deliver the same to the Secretary, who will hand the papers to the Executive Committee, with all other proof in his possession, of whatever character, relating to claims for membership, and on the order of said committee the Secretary will enroll all those whose proof is deemed sufficient by said committee, and the names shall be published by direction of said committee from the archives of Comptroller and Land Office, and other sources of information of character satisfactory to said committee.

The Association adjourned until 3 o'clock, p. m.

At 3 o'clock, p. m., Association met, Vice-President Russell in the chair, other officers present.

The President announced the following committeemen for the Senatorial Districts of the State as follows:

APPENDIX.

REPORT OF SECRETARY.

HOUSTON, May 20, 1874.

To the Texas Veterans Association:

The undersigned having been appointed Recording Secretary by the President, after the resignation or refusal of Mr. George Bringhurst to accept, has given a large portion of his time to the duties since the adjournment of the Association on the fifteenth of May, 1873. I prepared, with the assistance of Gen. J. B. Robertson, the most accurate list that could be made at the time from the data before me. Then went to Galveston to see on what terms the pamphlet, containing proceedings of meeting, list of names, address on the occasion, could be published. I left the matter with Guy M. Bryan, who had three thousand copies published. I left with Guy M. Bryan one hundred dollars of the one hundred and ninety-three dollars subscribed, and paid in to me at the conclusion of the meeting by the veterans. Mr. Gail Borden (who has now passed off the stage of action, and whose love of Texas and old Texans was well known), had subscribed one hundred of the one hundred and ninety-three dollars, afterward gave Guy M. Bryan fifty dollars more, and the balance of the cost of publishing the three thousand copies was paid by Guy M. Bryan. The ninety-three dollars is all I have had to pay traveling expenses, purchase of books, envelopes, stamps, printing, etc., which sum I propose to replace with a hundred dollar bond of the State of Texas on the first of July next, when the bonds are issued under the pension law. My wish is to be able to say that I had given the most of my time for the past year to the interest of the Association, and without cost to the Association. My old friend, Hon. Charles B. Stewart, of Montgomery county, gave me ten dollars when I met him in the city of Austin in March, and afterwards in April I met him in Austin and he gave me five dollars, which is all that has been contributed by any one. The newspapers have been very generous and liberal in publishing the circulars and notices I have had published from time to time by direction of the President. The pamphlets have been distributed all over Texas to old veterans and editors, and some copies have been sent to all of the Southern States and some of the Western States, where it was thought there might be some survivors of those who aided Texas in sustaining her independence from 2d October, 1835, the date of the first battle of Gonzales, till annexation in 1845. The pamphlets awakened an interest in the Association, and the circulars and notices published from time to time in the past year have brought hundreds of letters from all parts of the State, and some outside of the State, asking to be enrolled in the Association. The letters have generally been answered, and they are all filed. The contemplated revision of the names enrolled and asking enrollment has not been had. I have endeavored, by publications and letters, written to old pioneers and veterans, to elicit from them their recollections of events in the past history of Texas. Though not as much material has been gathered as I had hoped for, yet there is a good deal of matter that will be useful in preserving the Log Cabin History of Texas. It was hoped that all would feel an interest in reviving his recollections of the past, and that material would be collected, that, when put in a book, might produce a revenue to the Association which could be used to relieve the most needy of the old veterans in their old age. It is distressing to me to read the letters on file from some of the old veterans, in which they speak of their services to Texas, and their present decrepit and chronic ailments, and their almost universal poverty in their last days on earth. I would have visited the most of the District Committeemen appointed by President Johnson, and aided them in organizing the pioneers and old veterans, if I could have realized money from my lands to meet my expenses. Some five committeemen have acted and reported to me, but the most of them I have not heard from. Now that there has been evidence given that the Association is intended to be permanent, all who are entitled to become members have been applying daily for months past to have their names enrolled. I have forwarded certificates to all parts of the State to old veterans, to be by them distributed to such as are entitled to receive them—those who wished to join the Association, and had served Texas from 1820 up to annexation in 1845, either in the military or naval service, and all who served Texas in civil position, elected or appointed, up to the 23d of April, 1836. The Association is under lasting obligations to the Houston and Texas Central Railroad Company, the Galveston, Houston and Henderson Railroad Company, the Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio Company, the International and Great Northern Railroad Company, and the Texas Pacific Railroad Company, for their very generous and considerate appreciation of the services of the old veterans of Texas. All of these companies, upon my application, made by direction of President Johnson, to know upon what terms they would give passage to the old veterans who wished to attend the next annual meeting of the Association in the city of Houston, promptly replied that they would give all who held the certificate of the Secretary a free pass to Houston and back to their homes. The originals of the addresses to the railroad companies, and their replies, are on file, and copies were published at the time by the newspapers of the State, without charge, for which the old veterans and pioneers are thankful, and feel under obligations to the different editors. Many of our comrades have passed off the stage of action, and gone to that unknown country since we met here a year ago, and we who are here cannot all expect to meet again on earth. I hope to be able to get a correct list of the living old veterans, and a list of those who have gone to their long homes since we last met and organized this Association.

Your Secretary has made a hasty report of his doings since the adjournment of the Association, on the 14th Xr's, and in conclusion would say his has been in the work as much as in the success of the Republic of Texas in the ten years war with Mexico. I feel it a duty I owe to the memory of my maternal grandfather, who gave life (Moses Austin) in obtaining permission from the government of New Spain to colonize the wilderness of Texas. And I owe to the memory of my maternal uncle, Stephen F. Austin, who gave life from 1819, after the John Adams-Don De Oniz treaty, in aiding his life and in 1821 commencing and carrying the settlement of the wilderness of Texas up to his death on the 27th December, 1836. A duty I owe my seven sons and my grandchildren to do all I can to preserve the Log Cabin History of Texas. And though I am now in my fifty-seventh year (just the age Stephen Austin was when he died in June, 1837) yet I feel able to work in any way I be useful, and to spend my means in any way I may have to spare in contributing to the happiness and welfare of the survivors of the old pioneers and soldiers of Texas.

MOSES AUSTIN BRIDGES,
Recording Secretary of T.V.A.

REPORT OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

CITY OF AUSTIN, July 24, 1874.

The Executive Committee of the Texas Veteran Association, appointed at its annual meeting held at the city of Austin in May, 1874, have, with great care, examined the registry that was made at that time, and compared the same with the letters and papers in the possession of the Secretary, and with the records of the Comptroller's and General Land Offices, and have made out therefor the accompanying list. They do not suppose it to be perfect; doubtless there are some veterans not included in it, but it is as perfect as they could make it from the materials before them and from their own recollections. The change of the Constitution, made in May, 1874, at which the first class was made to include all who had served up to the 15th of October, 1836, took into that class the greater portion of those who formed the second class under the original Constitution. This fact was without doubt overlooked by the annual meeting of 1874, or the meeting would probably have made a further change of the Constitution, so as to make but two classes. The first to include all who rendered service up to the 15th of October, 1836, and the second class to include all who served after the 15th of October, 1836, and up to the period of annexation in 1845. Anticipating that such a change will be made in the Constitution at the next annual meeting, the committee in preparing the accompanying list, have arranged the names in that form. The committee invite all persons who discern errors in this list to report the same to the Secretary, Moses Austin Bryan, at Independence, Washington county, in order that they be corrected by him. We have authorized M. A. Bryan, the Secretary, to have published in pamphlet form, the proceedings of the annual meeting of 1874, with the address of Col. Charles DeMorse delivered on that occasion, together with the amended Constitution and By-Laws of the Association followed by this report, and the accompanying list of the veterans of the two classes, and the list of dead, in accordance with the recommendation in this report.

WM. J. RUSSELL,

First Vice-President, and Chairman of
of the Executive Committee.

MOSES AUSTIN BRYAN,

Recording Secretary.

E. M. PEASE,

JOHN M. SWISHER,

GEORGE HANCOCK,

W. B. P. GAINES.

Members of the Executive Committee, appointed at the annual meeting in May, 1874:

Frank W. Johnson, President; William J. Russell, First Vice-President; Moses Austin Bryan, Recording Secretary; E. M. Pease, George Hancock, J. B. Robertson, James H. Bell, John M. Swisher, W. B. P. Gaines.

COL. DEMORSE'S SPEECH.

My Brethren—When I say that such a meeting as this is a real pleasure to me, suggestive of the loftiest emotions, I say what proves itself in each of your hearts, for the pleasure is mutual—it is the long deferred meeting of a family circle annually contracting, whose members have been separated for years by the pressing necessities of life, after the cessation of war. We come together now, and look into each other's faces, who may never all meet again in this world.

I see around me, in the presence of its founders, the remains of the ever glorious little Republic of Texas, in whose era every citizen of intelligence knew something of every other citizen of average respectability, from the Sabine to the Rio Grande, because the progenitors of the Republic were so few in number, that individuality, which was the element of success in founding the Republic, stood out in bold relief, like a lone oak in a wide prairie. There sit around me, men whom I have not seen before ere this, since the fall of 1836, near thirty-eight years. I meet again the remains of that little army, which knew Thos. J. Rusk, Sam Houston, Albert Sidney Johnston, and Mirabeau B. Lamar, as its prominent members, and Wm. G. Cooke, Geo. W. Hockley, Edward Burleson, and Sidney Sherman, as its secondary but not less gallant leaders.

I look upon those who shared in the dangers and privations of the first settlement with Austin and the original three hundred; and there come with me from the Red River border, men who were within the limits of Texas in 1818, prior to the settlement by Austin, and who, in those days, ranged the Red River country, to repel and punish Indian aggression. And we have with us a few specimens of the generous old Texan planter of the coast counties, noble specimens of human nature, who, in other days, illustrated the genial hospitality of the pioneer period.

Is there not an involuntary swelling of the heart when such men as these come together after years of severance? and when the well remembered forms of the departed pioneers, still dearly cherished, pass in the review of memory, and we feel again their genial presence, and have impressed upon us vividly, their civic and military, and social virtues? Are we not necessarily carried back again into that era when 25,000 men, women and children constituted all the white population of Texas, and the largest forces it ever banded were 1200 men at Reason's ferry, and 1800 when Rusk's call to resist invasion, brought that number to the Colette for a short period in the fall of 1836? Was not San Jacinto fought by about 750 patriots? Was not San Antonio captured by 301 daring men, driving out of a fortified city a force of 1400? Did not Bowie and Fannin at Concepcion, with ninety men, drive off 400 assailants, and capture their cannon? When we look upon the face of the President of this Association, who received the capitulation of San Antonio, do we not look into the glorious past?

With us now, is the second in command at Gonzales, the Lexington of Texas, who came with Ned Barleson and Tom Dennis, the first to succor the eighteen who had thrown up temporary breastworks, and were determined to resist the removal of their single piece of artillery, which the Mexican commander had sent to take from them. Reinforced by squads until they outnumbered the assailants, they organized under Moore and Wallace, crossed the river and drove the enemy into an ignominious flight after a short skirmish. With us also is Amasa Turner, who commanded one of the three companies which came first to reinforce Houston, as he fell back from the Colorado, coming in with Col. John Forbes, Houston's aid, who is also with us. From another one of these captains, Richard Roman, dated San Francisco, April 25th, I have a letter evincing the deepest interest in our meeting to-day, and soliciting a copy of the proceedings, which, he says, "several of us veterans living here, will be pleased to read." He says, "I, of course, cannot be with you, except in sentiment and feeling. I regret this, because of the pleasure I should enjoy in personally meeting with our old companions in the early days of trouble." The third of this gallant trio, Wm. S. Fisher, participating at San Jacinto, acting as Secretary of War under Houston's first administration, and subsequently commanding the ill-fated Mission, has gone to his reward. All came out again in the fall of 1834, when Rusk called for men to repel the Mexicans. When we think of these men who went back into the chivalric period of our history, when patriotism in Texas was intuition, and as the committee's Felipe said, "it required more patriots to keep men at home than to get them into the service." Is not this expressive descriptive of the revolutionary period of our history?

We have also with us Alexander Leaton, a representative of the foremen who pursued Piedras to the Angelina, 1832, and Edwin Waller and Robert Williams, who were at the capture of Velasco, and who participated in the earliest civil councils of Texas with M. Pease, who was Secretary of the Council of the Provisional Government before the Declaration of Independence, and William J. Russell, whose name appears in the earliest movements for liberty. We have also Duncan and his who were at the capture of Goliad, and Hunter, Cooper and Scurlock, nearly the whole of the few who, except the general massacre of Fannin's men, I have with us, too, McKneely and Bow, who were with Grant's forces when captured at Goliad, and were carried off to Matamoros. We have with us also, six signers of the Declaration of Independence, Charles B. Stewart, S. B. Blount, J. W. Bunton, William Wells, Edwin Waller and William B. Swan, whose action changed the flag which we rallied, from the white, red and green of the Republican party of Mexico, to the azure field and the golden star of the Republic of Texas. These men carry us back to the inception of the Texas Revolution.

In those days, my friends, patriotism was the animating impulse. There were no speculations upon the public funds—there were no public funds. We had no speculative army contractors, because the only contractor we had, Tom McKinnon, had no means but his own money and credit, and the basis of his authorized purchases was, first to solicit assistance, and endeavor to negotiate a small loan. The army contractor, full of zeal, and not looking to profit, did not enrich himself.

as army contractors do in this day, but impoverished himself, and sacrificed his personal prosperity upon the altar of his country, dying in poverty, with the debt that Texas justly owed him unpaid. Texas, I fear, is not likely to disprove the old maxim which describes Republics as ungrateful.

In the past, which I am attempting feebly to describe, when the citizen heard of Indian aggression or Mexican invasion, he caught up his rifle, moulded a pouch full of balls, saddled his horse, arrayed his pack-mule, supplied himself with provisions, met the other male members of his settlement at an agreed place, and in squads or small companies, all available men, went out to fight for the general good, with a will which always insured success. Armed mainly with rifles, they attacked forts bristling with artillery, and captured them by picking off the defenders at the guns, or wherever a head was presented. Where else in the world has this been done, except in Texas!

My friends, though Texas was to us, in those days, a new country, and though little of her virgin sod, had ever been pressed by the foot of the white man, prior to the settlement by Austin and the cotemporary emissaries, except on two military roads or trails, from east to west, and at the localities of a few military posts, yet it had a history running back to 1683—a history commencing with religious colonization, and occupancy for the extension of territory, by ambitious European sovereigns—and its native loveliness had impressed the senses of discoverers and pioneers of colonization, a century and a half before our time, as they did ours. Yet their footprints were mere tracks in the vast wilderness, effaced as fast as made, and the legendary relations that we heard, and the slight visible remains, made impression upon us, as the Toltec ruins of the Casa Grande do upon the traveler of to day. We saw the missions of Goliad and San Antonio, evidences of the secondary occupation, and heard something about a long abandoned mission, and the open shaft of an abandoned silver mine in the San Saba region, and we see yet, in a bend of Red River, traces of an old fortification in Montague county, known by tradition as the old Spanish fort. Yet, these were at our coming the remains of a forgotten past, of which scarcely a memorial was then accessible, and they came to us as dim traditions, like the poetry of the Scottish border, which relates incidents not verified by later chronicles. The settlements we found, were mere oases in the surrounding wilderness, and to us, and in the aspect of nature, Texas was a new country, rich in primeval beauty, without sign of prior occupation, except at the four or five localities to which I have referred, remote from each other, and connected by narrow trails for travel in single or double file.

The only route of travel from the Southwest to the North, as late as 1842, was by the old military road to Nacogdoches, passing the Bradshaw place and the Mound prairie, which had once been the central seat of the Nasonis, the pioneer Indian tribes of the earliest known occupation of Texas. Those mounds are there now, silent memorials of a people who lived before our time, but have left no other evidences of their occupation save these mounds, and the record that LaSalle, the first white man, to penetrate the wilderness, found their builders there. Not a descendant exists to bear witness of their personal peculiarities. On the margin of Red River, in my own county, in three separate places, and in Bowie county in one, the same silent evidences attest prior occupation; how many centuries ago we do not know. In them may be found flint arrow heads, bones and potter's ware.

Beginning then with her earliest recorded history, the landing of LaSalle, nearly two hundred years ago, then seeking the mouth of the Mississippi, which he had discovered three years before, and which he had taken formal possession of in the name of Louis Le Grand, as the territory of France, we note his wanderings to the Colorado, the Brazos, the Trinity, and the Neches, reminding the reader of the earlier exploration by De Soto, of Florida, and the discovery of the great father of waters at the Natchez Bluff. From the first Texas has seemed to each explorer a land of strange beauty, and its successive historic periods, including the expeditions of McGee, Long, Perry, Kemper and Ross, to the settlement by Austin, De Leon and Edwards, terminating at San Jacinto, have been full of a rare interest which clings to them yet. Do we not all remember our first sensations, and can we not realize from them how La Salle and his companions must have felt, when passing through the beautiful Bay of St. Bernard, now recognized as Matagorda, they looked upon the flower-gemmed prairies of the Navidad and La Vaca, to which La Salle gave its name?

We all know how, at our first view, the strange wild beauty of the land aroused emotions of wonder; how the undulating formation impressed us; how the exuberance of verdure impressed us; how the wide prairies and clear running, narrow streams, fringed with trees to the water's edge, excited our sense of the beautiful. We saw the herds of wild horses, moving a little away, and faring about and scanning our movements. We saw great herds of deer feeding in the open prairie within two or three hundred yards, and heedless of our presence. We saw the sleek cattle nearly everywhere. But most attractive of all, and differing from all elsewhere, the litch string of every cabin door literally, not metaphorically, hung upon the outside, and there were no huts to dwelling, or meat house, or corn crib; but every corner was welcome to the primitive hospitality—a cordial, not a passive hospitality. Then no man feared robbery or wayside danger, but singly camped out anywhere that fuel could be found; turned his horse upon the abundant grass, cooked his meat upon a stick, and his horecake in the ashes, and the little camp coffee-pot from behind his saddle furnished him the facility for an invigorating beverage. The ease with which life could be sustained was wonderful—when the deer were everywhere, the cattle were everywhere, when the salt marshes bordering the bays were covered with myriads of wild fowl, when the plover, the killdeer and the prairie chickens would hardly keep ten steps away; when small fish might be drawn from the bays and bayous almost as fast as one would drop a line and leisurely withdraw it; when the great red fish might be stranded at Galveston by circling around them in shallow water, as the Mexican prisoners from San Jacinto procured them; when the islands of the bays furnished gull's eggs by the bucketful, and the margins of the creeks abounded with the peccanito grape. The land was a land of peace and a paradise of beauty. All those it in those days can understand the produced upon La Salle and his companions, when coming through the sheltered bay of Matagorda, after a safe voyage, not without dangers, they looked upon the bluff upon the Lavaca where they constructed Fort St. Louis and where the outlines of levees and ditches attest to this day the presence of the first European explorer and his colonists. Note the record of the first white settlers, and observe how identical were the impressions made upon them and upon us. The history of that expedition says: "The day was greatly refreshed by the abundance of game and fish, and charmed with the country, and the herds of buffaloes and deer that were seen grazing upon the prairies, they began to think they would soon realize the paradise they had come so far to find." This, my friends, is written in 1685. How identical all our own experience; save that the false had receded from the coast, and the cattle we found were in part, at least the successors of those which La Salle introduced from St. Domingo, by his ships, and the wild horses we saw, were the successors of those they found the Indians then in possession of, or which, perhaps, the Spaniards had brought when they established the mission.

Does not the mind of every one of us turn back to those days of primitive beauty, of hearty sincerity, of unfeigned and devoted friendship, of patriotism never surpassed; and contrasting the remembrance with this day of progress, this hard, grinding, money-hungry, struggling day, when show is everything and pretence in many instances takes the place of reality, does not the past seem a picture of beauty in a framing of gold? Compare it with the present! Canst thou nature is not now more beautiful than then, for the natural beauty is almost marred by the marks of more dense settlement. How is it with your hearts? Are your impulses as elevated? Do you feel the same proud interest in individuality as in the old Texas?—proud, glorious and indomitable? Comparing the intercourse and behavior of men, we find antipathies then, acid as now, but we had friendships that were wafner and purer; more devoted than now; and we did not idolize money. It must be confessed, that with the habit of the Anglo-Saxon race, we dreamed of enterprise and development in the future; but was not the dream more enchanting than the reality? Then, we diversified life and avoided monotony, by plunging into the surrounding wilds, in which there was always novelty of scene and freshness of sensation. We lived in a land of hope, with a thought of enlargement of capacities, and general wealth to result from development at some time; but among real men, who illustrated in the present the nobility of manhood, and were not wholly absorbed by thoughts of gain or any immediate expectation of it.

Did we appreciate fully how beautiful it was: how near to the Utopia of the dreamers? The hopes of youth ever run to the future, as did ours; but most of you have trodden both ends of the happy valley, and I think you have found the entrance most enchanting; and now, as you stand and look back at the setting sun, you regret that its bright gleams are disappearing, although another and brighter day is promised.

Another such land of beauty and fertility, of health, pleasant temperature, and natural conveniences, settled by a primitive American people, can no more be found again, than can there be a renewal of Lexington and Bunker's Hill, of Trenton, or King's Mountain, or of Yorktown. The new land, and the simple but powerful elements of character are wanting. Henceforth life is artificial, and elementary grandeur of character is secondary to the control of organized systems, and the power of money.

In the early days we had leisure—now all is haste, anxiety and wearing cares; and yet we all longed for the change. Human nature is ever the same, discontent with the present. All situations have their drawbacks, but the natural is purer and more satisfying than any work of art. The primeval beauty, and the prospective hopes of the early settlement, have passed away; the patriotic excitements with their glorious blending of self-confidence, indomitable will, and uncalculating zeal for the general good, are of the memory only, and you can only refresh your impulses by looking back: the glowing illusions upon which you constructed your day-dreams, are gone forever. We shall find no more Austins, Milams, Trávies; no more Rusk, Houstons, nor Sidney Johnstons; no more Tom McKinnerys; no more Deaf Smiths. We may find many others as intelligent, as brave and as honest, but not of that type of manhood. The men were suited to the era. Their character grew out of the surroundings.

And when I refer to these men of the old Texas, let it not be said that it is an exhibition of mere local pride, or pride of the past; an overestimate of men who figured on a narrow field of action.

Were not the unselfishness, the resolution, the patient perseverance of Stephen F. Austin, during serious difficulties and long imprisonment in a distant land, where he was representing the interests of his colonists; his calm statesmanship at home during the incipency of the Revolution, impressing itself upon Houston, who justly termed him the Father of Texas; the marked effect he produced in the United States as a commissioner from Texas, seeking sympathy and assistance; and his modest proposition to surrender his command of the army to Houston before the appointment of the latter to the chief command, upon the ground of his own inexperience in military affairs; were not these all evidence of rare personal qualities, self-denial and exalted patriotism?

Did not Daniel Webster and Wm. H. Seward, and Charles Sumner all estimate the mental capacity of Thos. J. Rusk as of a very high order, though not illuminated by any oratorical power? They have placed that estimate upon record. I know myself, being personally present, and having an inside view, that in the crisis of 1850, when the Union of the States was seriously endangered, and the power of the Great Pacificator had failed with his own party, that the influence of Thos. J. Rusk was relied upon by Millard Fillmore to secure the passage of the compromise resolutions, still needing a few votes to make the result certain, and save the country from immediate discord; and that the earnest management and direct influence of Rusk, through others in the House of Representatives, did procure their passage. In the Senate they were safe. What a power he was at home, though always retiring and diffident of his own merits, all old Texans know.

And what was Albert Sidney Johnston? First our Adjutant General under Rusk, in '36, and subsequently commander-in-chief of the army, then Secretary of War. He abandoned the army of the United States to come to us; and when Texas had no pressing use for him, sought employment again in the old service, and at once rose to position. He was assigned to the chief command in Utah when that service was deemed critical and superior ability was needed. He was considered by the then Secretary of War the first soldier in the service of the United States. I have heard him say so. There is no call to eulogize him now. His character and fame are above that necessity. We who personally knew him loved him for his social qualities and his elevated tone, before he had ascended the eminence upon which fame now builds his monument.

The character of Sam Houston was coupled with a romantic interest long before he came to Texas, and as the friend and favorite of Jackson, and with his popularity as a young Governor of Tennessee, he sought Texas with a prestige which commanded confidence and popularity. Inspection of his acts and his correspondence at the commencement of the struggle in Texas, will establish at once his character for great judgment of men and circumstances, and his final action at San Jacinto, and his joint appeal with Rusk, to the people, two days before, manifest a calm comprehension of the crisis and the surroundings and a confidence of a favorable result, while his reply to the taunts of the acting Secretary of War, and his certificate of the benefits to the army of the presence and counsels of Rusk, evince at the same time the magnanimity of Houston's character, and the brotherly unity between these two. His military policy, however it may have been questioned, and there was at the time much variance of opinion, and a disposition to charge him with a want of nerve in retreating from the Colorado, and permitting the breaking up of the settlements west of the Trinity, resulted in the greatest little victory ever achieved by a people struggling against overwhelming preponderance of arms and resources. San Jacinto did not equate Marathon in grandeur of purpose, but was identical in objects and result.

Of Mirabeau B. Lamar, another of our heroes, it is proper to say, that he conducted, in manner, in presence, he illustrated the courtly chivalry of Sir Ralph Sidney, with a similar poetic temperament, and more mental ability. His gallantry and modesty enforced the warmest eulogiums from Rusk and Houston, and by general acclamation of the army, to which he was a new count won his spurs in one day, the action of the 20th, and on the final day, the 21st, by common approval, was placed in command of the cavalry. Coming to Texas a Knight Palmelin, offering his sword as a person in the cause of liberty, as Lafayette did, by a vote almost unanimous rose to the highest position in the country. I doubt if he was a strictly practical executive, but he was a noble and valiant man, whose actions were prompted by the most generous impulses and govern humanity.

David G. Burnet, our first President, was a devotee of Liberty in his boyhood and signalized his tendencies by joining Miranda's expedition to relieve the American Republic from the oppression of Spain. The same free idealism led him to Texas, where his talents and purity of character were appreciated by making him first President, and the war's Vice-President, under Lamar. He was a writer of great force and purity, and a pure and fearless man. No profits inured to him from public service. No profits inured to any of the men of the day. They did not work for public plunder. They all died poor, and left an element of their pure fame.

Has there ever in the world's history been gallantry more conspicuous than that of Travis and his companions? It was not his defense of the Alamo that respects equal to that of Thermopylae. And the declaration upon which he died, and by which he died, sword in hand, it is a memorial to be enshrined in ways upon the historic pages of Texas to be impressed upon the minds of her youth; to be cut deep into her blood monuments of bronze and marble, to challenge comparison with the noble evidences of patriotic valor which the world has ever afforded. Let me read:

COMMANDANCY OF THE ALAMO,
BEXAR, Feb. 24, 1836.

"Fellow Citizens and Compatriots: I am besieged by a thousand or more Mexicans under Santa Anna. I have sustained a continued bombardment for twenty-four hours, and have not lost a man. The enemy have demanded a surrender at discretion; otherwise the garrison is to be put to the sword, if the place is taken. I have answered the summons with a cannon shot, and our flag still waves proudly from the walls. I shall never surrender or retreat! Then I call upon you, in the name of liberty, of patriotism, and of everything dear to the American character, to come to our aid with all dispatch. The enemy are receiving reinforcements daily, and will no doubt increase to three or four thousand in four or five days. Though this call may be neglected, I am determined to sustain myself as long as possible, and die like a soldier, who never forgets his own honor and that of his country. Victory or death!

"W. BARRETT TRAVIS.

"Lieutenant Colonel Commanding."

"P. S.—The Lord is on our side. When the enemy appeared in sight, we had not three bushels of corn. We have since found in deserted houses eighty or ninety bushels, and got into the walls twenty or thirty head of bees."

Then in his private letter dated the 3d of March, he says: "I am still here, in fine spirits and well to do. With one hundred and forty-five men, I have held this place ten days against a force variously estimated from fifteen hundred to six thousand, and I shall continue to hold it till I get relief from my countrymen, or I will perish in its defense. We have had a shower of bombs and cannon balls continually falling among us the whole time, yet none of us have fallen. We have been miraculously preserved."

Still the same heroic spirit unflinching. But reinforcements did not come in any considerable number. Assistance was delayed too long, and at the final struggle there were only 183, weary with endless watching, to resist 4000. At a little after midnight, on Sunday, the 6th of March, the final effort of the surrounding host commenced. Urged on by promises and threats, though terribly thinned out by the Texan fire, they kept up the attack until daylight, and then advanced with scaling ladders. Twice the host was repulsed by the little band of worn defenders, but physical capacity was unequal to the requirement, and the tremendous disproportion of force carried the walls at the third assault, and every hero within sold his life as dearly as possible. When pressed upon, and no time for reloading, they clubbed their guns, and fell fighting. Around the bodies of Travis and Crockett were piles of slain. Bowie, sick in bed, was butchered and mutilated. In the attempt to perform the last agreed duty of patriotism, by firing the magazine, and hurling masses of the assailants to destruction, the ordnance officer, the faithful Evans was slain, and the glorious immolation of a servile horde upon the altar of liberty, was prevented. The record of the historian reads:

"Thus fell the Alamo and its heroic defenders; but before them lay the bodies of five hundred and twenty-one of the enemy, with a like number wounded. At an hour by sun, on that Sabbath morning, all was still; yet the crimson waters of the aqueduct around, the Fort resembled the red flag on the church at Bexar! The defenders of Texas did not retreat, but lay there in obedience to the command of their country; and in that obedience the world has witnessed among men no greater moral sublimity."

Little did the victor in that day's fight understand its effect upon the men he had to contend with. He counted upon intimidation and repression. There could not have been lighted a more brilliant beacon fire to rally the free spirits of Texas, and their sympathizing brethren of the Southwest of the Union, and from that day of butchery the merciless despot marched in his narrow pathway to a certain defeat, and the destruction of his power and his prestige as a conqueror. In the words of President Burnett's proclamation, of the 18th of March:

"The fall of the Alamo is the surest guarantee of our success. The Spartan band who so nobly perished there, have bequeathed to us an example which ought and will be imitated; and have indicted on the enemy a terror and a loss that are equivalent to a defeat."

Yotatum

The heroic Milum gave his life as Warren did at Bunker's Hill. The examples are identical. Travis, Bowie, Crockett, Bonham and their fellows in the Alamo, invested San Antonio with more than the patriotic interest of the opening battle of the American revolution. The gallantry was much more signal, persistent and self-sacrificing. The Alamo, as a field of heroism, has but one rival in the world's history, and that is Thermopylae.

It has been said that "it is sweet to die for our country." Compared with the ignoble survival of the victor of the hour, the self-vaunted "Napoleon of the West," for years a wretched outcast from his country, devoting the remainder of a mispent and dishonored life to low gratifications, was it not a glorious departure that Travis and his heroic band made on that bright Sabbath morning in March, when all nature was growing into beauty, and men feel least like bidding farewell to the surrounding attractions of the world?

Look at the submission of Fannin to his fate, after being received as a prisoner of war. It is well known that his bearing elicited the admiration of his captor, who certified it both before and after the brutal massacre. Wounded and unable to stand, he sat down, calmly tied the bandage required over his own eyes, bared his bosom to the balls, meeting death as a hero and a patriot may do, without the quivering of a muscle. It was fitting that this act of sacrifice of Fannin and his 330 men, like that of the Alamo, was consummated on the blessed Sabbath day. Our blood offerings were all sanctified, and God accepted them; and upon the glorious field of San Jacinto, came the redemption which they purchased for us; came in the fire and smoke of battle; came to the appalled wretches who had obeyed the behests of their tyrant leader, with the ominous cries of "Remember the Alamo and La Bahia," ringing in their ears like trumpets braying retributive vengeance. And indeed it was appalling. Though double the number of our little army, they made but ten or fifteen minutes resistance, and shot down by hundreds and fleeing under the impulse of an indescribable terror, the proud array of the Napoleon of the West shrunk away like the dry grass of a prairie before a raging fire; and before the General, but an hour before mighty potentate, the head of millions of people, was pursued and caught in a disguised and crest-fallen fugitive, and blanched by terror, and conscious crime, sought to retain his perished life by imploration and abjuration. What a change within a day! How soon the despot became the supplicant! Vividly the scene of that day's Marstonay, detailing the incidents of other field centuries ago, in which vengeance claimed payment for earlier slaughter:

"Their ranks are breaking like the sickle wheat
The field is heaped with bleeding steeds, and fallen
And there we thought on vengeance, and the day Remember St. Bartholomew," was passed from to man.

For our God hath crushed the traitor, or God And marked the council of the wise, and to the the house—
Then glory to his holy name from whom it flows."

Certainly, in the almost instantaneous results of this battle, there is something to indicate the fiat of a just God. It rules the destinies of nations, and strengthened that little band of patriots, without the usual appliances of warfare, to overcome the well equipped and entrenched army opposed to the choicest troops and the bravest generals of the Mexican army.

Rusk said of it, in his official dispatch: "This glorious achievement is attested to the valor of our soldiers and the sanctity of our cause. * * * The men and men seemed to be actuated by an enthusiasm. There was a general which pervaded our ranks. Remember the Alamo—remember La Bahia—these words electrified all." "Forward" was the cry. The unerring aim and invincible energy of the Texan army could not be withstood. It was freedom fighting against the minions of tyranny, and the result proved the inequality of such contest.

The sun was sinking in the horizon the battle commenced; but at the close of the conflict, the sun of liberty and independence rose in Texas, never to set.

And cried aloud by that nation wonderful man—great General be hoped, to be obscured by the clouds of despotism. * * A volume would not contain the deeds of individual daring and bravery."

This is the testimony of the not over declamatory Secretary of War.

In this commemorative reference to the participators in our early history, our little navy should not be forgotten, for it had gallant material, in Hawkins, Hurd, Brown and George Wheelwright, and later under the gallant Moore, who carried our flag boldly into the enemy's waters, and drove them before him. The little Independence was captured by superior force, and one side of the gallant Wheelwright carried away by a cannon shot. She was attacked by four times her weight of metal, and perhaps ten times her number of men. As evincing the spirit of those who carried the flag upon the waters, your speaker is able to testify that when Hawkins sailed down the coast to the Brazos Santiago, prior to San Jacinto, fifteen men, including officers, seamen and marines, comprised the entire force to sail the vessel and man the six side guns and the nine pounder pivot amidship. But with always an insignificant force in number, we defied the enemy upon the waters of the Gulf, and kept our coasts clear; and at Copano, Burton's cavalry—horse marines—captured three of the enemy's vessels freighted with supplies for their army. The navy was always a favorite with the people, though it never had brilliant opportunities, and from the field of San Jacinto the army divided Santa Anna's treasure with it.

Passing from the military to the legislative, do you remember what Congresses the little Republic assembled, first at Columbia, then at Houston, and then at Austin, in the old wooden Capitol, stockaded as a gathering place for women and children, in case of a sudden irruption by Indians?

Do you recollect of the first Congress William H. and John A. Wharton, Moses Baker, Anson Jones, Branch D. Archer, Bill Williamson; and after that Sam Houston, Cornelius Van Ness, Robt. Potter, Jas. H. Mayfield, David S. Kaufman, Kenneth L. Anderson, James B. Miller, James Shaw, Wm. B. Ochiltree, Wm. H. Jack, James Webb, Wm. Henry Daingerfield, John B. Jones, John Caldwell, Antonio Navarro? These were solid men in any legislative body. I shall not invite special comparison, but men of this grade do not abound in our legislatures now. Probably a reason is, that State legislatures are seldom so attractive of talent as national legislative bodies, and in those days all public councils had loftier repute than at the present. We, who have been the associates of these men, and had the felicity to know them personally, and feel that our lives have in some degree been hallowed thereby; who have, in our humble sphere, had a part in the formation of an empire; whose thoughts have been elevated and purified in the past, by a consciousness that we were ministering to a great future—we experience only the common fate of all pioneers of progress, in finding that our ships of venture do not come home laden with attar of roses, and fragrant spices, and gold and gems of the Indies, but only with the common merchandise which serves the ordinary uses of life, and that our ventures have not materially enriched us; yet if they have secured homes and national enjoyment of life to others; if they have populated a fair land, and conducted to the good of great masses, may we not console ourselves that we have not lived in vain; but that doing this good for others, even though those others were in great part strangers, we have wrought out a great work, perhaps, hardly appreciating the full magnitude of what we did? And so doing, with consciences unsecured, and remembrances of good intent, can we not feel that our lives have been useful if not peculiarly profitable; and can we not, when the indicator halts upon the dial, wrap the drapery of our couches around us and quietly lie down, to be passed through the portals of the future, content, trustful, satisfied? Life is at best, until we pass the meridian, but a continued longing for the happy days beyond our view—the bright to-morrow which never comes. Are those who struggle for a little more gain, and who handle much, and are responsible for much, constantly apprehensive of loss, though they have to leave it all, without reserve—are these happier than we who have not much but quiet homes and quiet minds?

My friends, happiness is in the heart, in the memory, in the fixed purpose to do good, and the consciousness of having done good. Standing upon the verge of the great future of the Empire of Texas; looking into the glorious past of which we have been an humble part; treasuring our old friendships; pleading for the preservation of the entirety of the old Texas and the continued fealty of all to its perpetuation and prosperity; let us annually all meet who may continue in this life, and do honor to those who annually depart. Let us offer up daily prayers for the perpetuity of the great confederacy of which we are a part, and its purification from political harlotry and jobbery. Let us give calm counsel and hopeful to those who are following us upon the tide of Time, and who we are to recognize as our legitimate successors, and we shall have played our parts faithfully, and may confide in the appreciation of the Power that overwhelms armies and creates States, and yet notices the least act of the least conspicuous of us all.

I may trespass upon your patience if I attempt to forecast the future of the empire, of which you were substantially the founders; and yet I will indulge in a glance at that future, as compared with the past. San Felipe de Austin, its once noted seat of government, has about the same relation to the present of Texas as Jamestown has to that of Virginia. The traveler who has a taste for antiquities, and desires to see the first capitol of Texas, may find it difficult to ascertain its precise locality, even from the people of a county adjoining that in which its deserted site is to be found. And Washington, the first seat of government of the independent Republic of Texas, is in a state of delapidation, and its name rarely mentioned. Events are rapid in succession in this day. The city of Campeche, but sixty years ago, was the naval station of the army, and subsequently the headquarters of the brilliant, courteous and gallant Buceancer of the Gulf, who assisted in the defense of New Orleans, and at his red house in Campeche, surrounded by a flourishing town, dispensed profuse hospitalities to official agents and other visitors, and diplomatically foiled naval commanders ordered to dispossess him. Thence, for years he sent out squadrons which destroyed the monarchies of Europe. At its abandonment by him in 1822 it came again a waste, and when the speaker first saw it 1835, was a desolate sand bank, with but two design marks—the rough board customhouse, the government of Mexico, occupied one room with a ground floor; and bushes known as the Three Trees, which the navigator sailing along the line of coast recognized the locality. In that harbor the Texan schooner Independence, under the command Charles Edward Hawkins, a gentleman, sailed on the 21st of Feb. 1835, and found an uninhabited land and at a little distance from the shore the schooner Dart, with Monroe's cargo of Africans. On that locality rises, from the low lands surrounding, a city like Venice, ardent and ambitious, and with commercial prospects nearly brilliant as its archetype. So located to command the trade of an immense gulf, and to become perhaps the maritime outlet for the wares of the Indies, on their route from the Pacific coast to the Atlantic shore; being from her direct tributaries the bed of an empire; growing in population and commerce now with great rapidity; its prospects under enterprising management are boundless. And as the commercial metropolis of the Union has run out from the swampy pastures of the coast, it spread itself all over the island of Manhattan, and over the adjacent shores of Long Island and New Jersey, some of us may live to see the city of Galveston, embracing Delmar, Virginia points and Pelican Island, destined as it is to commercial supremacy on the southern boundary of the Republic. Some of us will yet see the time when the population of Texas, kept intact, will be counted by millions, and Galveston and Indianola, Saluria and Sabine City shall become ports of entry for immense quantities of merchandise, and still greater quantities of home products. In those the natural beauties of the Old Tex will save in superficial configuration have been in a great degree obliterated, and in their place will be the true wealth of production, and the commercial rivalry and advancement resulting from the increase of population and products; and in place of the primal native beauty of the land will be the artificial beauty created by wealth and refined taste. With the aggregation of population and wealth will naturally come manufacture of our great Southern staple, and of wool, which we produce more cheaply than any of the Northern States: refineries for our sugar product, and packeries for our beef product; and many of these may probably be concentrated in the vicinity where we stand, or contiguous to the limits of the public spirited city of Houston, of which we are annual guests, and which reaches our hearts and secures our respect, not alone by its present disposition to honor us, but by its connection with our early history as an independent Republic, and our admiration for its ceaseless enterprise, and ever liberal public expenditures.

With the manufacture of our natural products to which I have alluded, and the aggregation of population commensurate to our territory, we shall become what the world terms prosperous, and if we can preserve public and private virtue, above all, if we can preserve the heroic virtues of the Fathers of Texas, the simplicity, the directness, the chivalry, the political influence of Texas as an integral part of the American Union will scarcely be surpassed by the oldest and most populous States.

These results of course must depend upon the preservation of the political entirety of the present territory, and this must depend upon a mutual sense of justice between all the sections, the north, the east, the centre, the south and the west. In these are persons who, for selfish purposes, will be willing to divide into three or more States, for which there is enough of territory and of population. Arguments for this will not be wanting—homogeneity of interests, increase of political representation in the Senate of the United States; unfair distribution of public favors by legislative action; partialities of sections to their own candidates for State officers. All of these will furnish pretexts for dissolution; and the preventive and the preservation of amity must depend upon the avoidance of just grounds for dissatisfaction; by even-handed justice in the distribution of all benefits, and the encouragement of fraternal amity. As a whole, we may point to our vastness of territory; to our unequalled fertility; to our variety of climate, free of extremes; to our beauty of scenery; our abundance of water power; to our forests of valuable timber; our mines of coal, iron and copper of vast extent and fabulous richness; to our wealth of herds, and the ease with which they are increased upon the natural pasturage; to our railroads, affording facility for rapid development of resources; to our natural position, combining the products of the North and South, our soil and climate, developing in the fullest measure the wheat, corn, barley and apples of the North, side by side with the cotton of the South, and in our coast counties the sugar and fruits of the tropics. We may point with allowable pride to San Antonio and Austin, Houston and Galveston, to Dallas, Sherman, Denison, Paris and Jefferson as specimens of rapid growth and enterprise. They are all now our Texas cities and towns; but if we divide then they will not be all ours. And how shall we divide the honors of the Alamo and San Jacinto, and the feats of the men of Texas at Manassas and Gaines' Mill, and Gettysburg, and Antietam, and Chancellorsville, and Corinth, and Murfreesboro, and Mansfield? These memories are not divisible. May we not pray that there shall be no cause for division; that justice and fraternity shall be presiding influences, and that we may all, in the future as in the past, be known to each other as Texans, proud of the name for the memories with which it is associated, and hopeful of the future, for the glories which may entwine it, and proud of each other as citizens of the greatest and most powerful of the States of the Confederacy. Your speaker prays for this, my friends; but we must all bear in mind how, alone, its perpetuity can be insured. I hope not to see that day when my associates of 1836 shall be cut off from me by a severance of interests and political disruption, and I shall know them as citizens of another State, not as Texans pure and simple, but as South Texans, or West Texans, or with designations less acceptable still.

My friends, at the next annual meeting how many of us shall be here? I trust all who can be, and for those who are not, we may entreat the blessings of a beneficent Providence. Fearful that I may have wearied you, yet unwilling to omit allusion to any of the topics which the nature of our annual meeting has forced into consideration, I have endeavored, as briefly as practicable, to refer to the memories which rush to the front upon such an occasion.

CONSTITUTION OF THE TEXAS VETERAN ASSOCIATION.

PREAMBLE.

We, the undersigned, soldiers and seamen of the Republic of Texas, having met at the city of Houston, on this the 14th day of May, A. D. 1873, to interchange greetings and fellowships in commemoration of the memorable days of the Republic of Texas, do hereby adopt the following Constitution and By-Laws as declaratory of the objects of our Association, and for the government of the same.

One of the objects contemplated by the Association is to have enrolled in a bound book, for better preservation and future reference, the full name, age, nativity, date of immigration, and present residence of every surviving soldier and seaman of the Republic of Texas. Another object is to bring about a more intimate acquaintance and intercourse for mutual assistance and pleasure, to assist such of the veteran soldiers and seamen as misfortune or poverty may have overtaken in their declining years, and assist such in bringing their claims before the country; and also to assist the State of Texas in deciding who are justly entitled to pensions; also to bring about general and partial meetings, from time to time, for mutual greeting and pleasure.

CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1. All the survivors of "The Old Three Hundred," the soldiers and seamen of the Republic of Texas, who were enrolled into proper and legally authorized companies or detachments, or served a tour of duty against Mexicans or hostile Indians, from the year 1820 up to the period of annexation of Texas to the United States of America in the year 1845, and were honorably discharged, and produce the proof required by this Constitution, that they served good faith the object for which they were enrolled, shall be entitled to membership in this Association.

SEC. 2. All citizens who were appointed by the Government, or elected by the people, to positions of trust from the year 1820 up to the 15th day of October, 1836, shall also be entitled to membership in this Association.

SEC. 3. The members of this Association shall be divided into five classes. The first class shall include survivors of the "Old Three Hundred" all soldiers, seamen and citizens who produce the proof required of service from the year 1820 till the 15th day of October, 1836.

SEC. 4. The second class shall include all those soldiers and seamen who produce the proof required of service at any time between the 15th of October, 1836, and the 1st day of November, 1837.

SEC. 5. The third class shall include all soldiers and seamen who produce required proof of service between the first day of November, 1837, and the period of annexation of Texas to the United States of America, in the year 1845.

SEC. 6. To acquire full membership in either of the three classes of this Association, the person must be a male citizen of the State of Texas, but persons now non-residents of the State who rendered service to Texas may become honorary members of the Association.

SEC. 7. "The Old Three Hundred" and all who participated in the war during the first period named, and are entitled to bounty land warrants or donation land from the Government for services in any of the battles of the Revolution, or in the campaigns of 1821, 1823 and 1836, shall be styled "The Veteran Guard of Texas," and shall rank according to their merits.

SEC. 8. The character of good required for the classes other than the "Veteran Guard" shall be the written statement of the interested person, sustained by two reputable persons, on their oath of honor, that the facts set forth are true.

SEC. 9. The power to accept or reject applicants for membership shall be exercised by the Association, under such rules and by-laws as they may adopt from time to time.

ARTICLE II.

SECTION 1. The officers of this Association shall be a President, two Vice-Presidents, a Treasurer, a Recording and Corresponding Secretary, and such number of District Committeemen as may be found necessary to carry out the objects contemplated by the Association. The Treasurer and Recording Secretary may be filled by the same person, if deemed advisable.

SEC. 2. The officers shall hold their offices for one year, unless otherwise determined by the Association, and may be elected by ballot, or vice voce, as the members present may determine, and all members who may be prevented or are unable to attend the annual or called meetings, shall be entitled to vote by proxy; and all officers shall hold their offices until their successors are elected and qualified.

SEC. 3. The President shall have power to call meetings on any occasion that he may think proper, and in case of vacancies in any of the offices, from any cause, the President shall have power to fill the same for the time being.

SEC. 4. The President shall preside at all meetings, and see that proper order and decorum be maintained; shall give timely notice of all meetings through the press; and in his absence, the first Vice-President shall preside and discharge all the duties of the President. In the absence of the President and the first Vice-President, the second Vice-President shall discharge all the duties of President; and in the absence of all three of these officers, the veterans at any meeting can call any member present to the chair, who shall have the authority to discharge the duties of President.

SEC. 5. The Recording Secretary shall have well bound books, in which he shall keep a full and true record of all the proceedings of the Association, and such other documents as he may be ordered to record by a vote of the Association; also to file and preserve all papers and documents that are received by him, touching the interest of the Association; shall issue all notices required by the President of meetings, or other matter, relating to the Association; shall turn over to his successor in office all books, papers and documents in his possession, taking his receipt for the same.

SEC. 6. The Treasurer shall receive all moneys due or donated to the Association, receipting for the same if required; keep a true record of all money received and paid out, and make quarterly reports to the President on the 1st of April, 1st of July, 1st of October and 1st of January. The Treasurer shall pay out such moneys as may be in his hands on the orders of the President, or on the order of the Financial Committee, that the President may appoint.

SEC. 7. The Corresponding Secretary shall perform such duties as may be directed by the President and Association.

ARTICLE III.

SECTION 1. The members present at any regular or called meeting shall have power to adopt any and all by-laws, rules and regulations for their government that may to them seem necessary; to divide the State into districts, and to appoint one or more of the veterans in each district to discharge the duties required of him or them of such district.

SEC. 2. It shall be the duty of each District Committee to ascertain the name, nativity, age, date of immigration to Texas, postoffice of every veteran coming within either of the classes named, with such proof as the party applying for such membership may furnish such committee.

SEC. 3. The District Committees shall have authority to call the veterans of their district together, if it should be desired by them, at any time and place that may be selected, for the transaction of business, or for mutual greetings and pleasure; and it shall be the duty of the District Committee to record the place and date of demise of any veteran, and the class to which he belongs, and promptly forward the same to the Recording Secretary. And they shall also report to the same officer the name and postoffice of any veteran in their district, who may be, from any cause, suffering for the necessities of life, or other necessary attention; and it shall be the duty of said committee to place before the veterans of their district, without delay, the suffering condition of such veterans, and ask from them such assistance as humanity and the objects of the Association require, reporting the same, with the amount of assistance rendered, to the Recording Secretary, to be by him reported to the next general meeting of the Association for its action.

Sec. 4. The Districts may be represented at the annual or general call meetings of the Association by delegates, where all cannot attend in person.

Sec. 5. The President, or presiding officer, shall appoint all committees, unless otherwise ordered by the members present, at any meeting, and shall have authority to do any and all things necessary to carry out the objects of the Association that may not have been specified in the Constitution and By-Laws.

BY-LAWS.

SECTION 1. The rules governing the business of the Association shall be those governing ordinary parliamentary bodies.

Sec. 2. The President, or member elected for the time being, shall preside at all meetings, and shall see that the proper order and decorum are maintained, and that the rules governing the Association are observed.

Sec. 3. Every member, in addressing the President, shall rise to his feet; and in case two or more shall rise at the same time, the President shall decide who is entitled to the floor, and the others shall be seated. And no member shall be allowed to speak more than once on the same subject, until all who desire to do so shall be heard, and the President shall see that the speaker is strictly confined to the subject before the meeting.

Sec. 4. The President shall appoint a committee of finance—to consist of three or five persons, as he may deem best—whose duty it shall be to ascertain the best plan of raising the funds necessary to carry out the objects of the Association; which committee shall be authorized to receive any contributions in money or other articles, and they shall also make an estimate of what amount of funds may be necessary to annually carry out the objects of the Association; which committee shall be authorized to receive any contributions in money or other article; to make an estimate of the amount each member shall be asked to contribute annually, voluntarily, for the same purpose.

Sec. 5. It shall be the duty of the Finance Committee, and every member of the Association, to send to the Recording Secretary the amount donated as per to any needy veterans of either the with the full name of the donor to be recorded in a bound book, to be kept for that purpose, and the names of all donors shall be read out at the annual meetings.

Sec. 6. The order of business shall be:

1. Reading and adopting minutes of preceding meeting.
2. Reports of standing committees.
3. Reports of special committees.
4. General business.
5. Election and installation of officers.
6. Annual oration.
7. Motions and resolutions.
